

homo loquens

rethinking foreign language learning for business

Data protection policy (in accordance with GDPR)

In the public area of www.homoloquens.eu, which is accessible without specially requested customer access, data transmission will only occur when transmitting the contact form. I voluntarily renounce the collection of any other data.

By submitting my contact form you transfer the following data to me:

- the name of your enterprise
- the name of a contact person
- a phone number
- an email address
- a message to me

I use these data confidentially and solely for contacting you. By submitting the contact form you explicitly consent to being contacted by me either by phone oder by email. As a matter of course, you can withdraw this consent at any time.

I will under no circumstances pass any of your data to a third party. Your data is reliably protected against unauthorized accesss, I nevertheless point out that data transmission on the internet may have security gaps.

On request, I will gladly provide you with information on whether and to what extent I store personal data about you. If your personal data is incorrect, you can have it rectified immediately. If you don't want any personal data to be stored, I will delete any data immediately.

To exercise these rights, please contact:

Christian Lemm. Am Marktweg 24. 42781 Haan (Gruiten). Germany.

Phone number: 02104-8198220. Email address: christian@homoloquens.eu.

homo loquens

rethinking foreign language learning for business

A few words about “cookies”

“Cookies”: a word you are nowadays likely to read on almost every single web site you visit. But what are cookies and what do you, as a visitor to my web site, need to know about cookies?

Cookies are very small text files a web server (in this case: my web site www.homoloquens.eu), saves on a web client (in this case: your computer), via a web browser.

Without cookies, modern web programming is hardly possible. But I promise, that I'll only use as many cookies as needed, and as few as possible.

Let me explain that to you: Cookies are not necessarily harmful. Many useful web applications are only possible by using cookies, or at least considerably more comfortable by using cookies. Just to give one example: You'll appreciate it when www.homoloquens.eu remembers the language you usually use when visiting the site – the site will be shown to you in this language on your next visit, without you having to chose it again. That's comfortable – and completely harmless.

Nevertheless, there can be “evil” cookies as well – or at least cookies that can do things you don't want them to do. Cookies can be used to track your web activities and to pursue marketing campaigns tailored to your web activities based on the data collected.

That's something I won't do. I completely renounce any tracking of your web activities, for whatever purpose.

On the following page you'll find all cookies I make of, those necessary und those increasing the ease of use.

homo loquens

rethinking foreign language learning for business

Overview of "cookies" on www.homoloquens.eu

Necessary cookies:
I use cookies that identify you as a customer with a valid customer access and that allow you to enter your customer area. These cookies will be deleted on leaving the customer area.
Cookies increasing ease of use:
In case you have consented, a few more cookies will be used. These are: <ul style="list-style-type: none">- a cookie saving your consent into the use of cookies- a cookie saving your preferred language